

The context

Second wave of coronavirus.

Hospitals have been overwhelmed with many running out of oxygen and beds.

More than 250,000 confirmed new cases every day.

Many workers have lost their livelihoods and income.

India is currently experiencing a devastating second wave of coronavirus that has seen hospitals and crematoriums overwhelmed and widespread shortages of oxygen, medicines and hospital beds. Case numbers and deaths are continuing to rise and it is widely agreed that the real extent of the crisis is under-reported. Fourteen Integral Members are responding with established local Partners to provide medical supplies, oxygen and support for livelihoods.
